➤ ISO 9001:2015 Gap Assessment Service

ISO 9001, the world's most popular management system is being revised to ensure it maintains its relevance in today's market place. All organizations currently certified to ISO 9001:2008 will need to transition to the new requirements by September 2018.

The new ISO 9001 provides a great opportunity for your organization to review your quality management system ensuring it's integrated into the strategic priorities of your organization adding real value to your business.

Choosing a gap assessment, prior to your formal transition assessment can provide valuable insight into your progress in meeting the new requirements.

What is a gap assessment?

A transition gap assessment is a pre-assessment where we take a closer look at your transition plan and quality management system comparing it with the requirements of ISO 9001:2015.

One of BSI's expert assessors will review your transition plan and how you intend to conform to the new requirements on context of the organization, leadership and risks and opportunities. Our assessor will review your processes, documented information and evidence that you have met the requirements set out in the new standard.

You'll receive a detailed written report that explains the gaps between your current situation and the new standard requirements, and identifying further opportunity for improvement, saving your organization time and money.

As a first step in your transition journey with BSI, a gap assessment can help confirm where your system is already compliant and any gaps.
