

PAS

The sponsored approach for developing consensus based standardization with the UK's National Standards Body

...making excellence a habit.™

How can a PAS help you?

A PAS can help

Industry self-regulate and avoid more red tape

Minimize complaints and build trust with consumers

Improve productivity and reduce costs

Maintain quality levels and reduce non-compliances

Accelerate innovation across a sector and avoid unnecessary duplication

“Due to recent advances in technology Phased Array inspection is being used to inspect welds in all industry sectors. However, the fact that there is currently no formal European Acceptance standard means insurers are unable to easily approve the use of Phased Array inspection for inspecting welds, therefore the end users could not fully benefit from the increased speed, quality and safety of this method. This PAS fills that standards gap and will immediately increase demand for the use of this technology to the benefit of the whole industry.”

Michael Dodd, Director of ITCL

Where has the development of a PAS helped?

- Optimizing management of physical assets - PAS 55

Sponsored by major infrastructure operators to improve performance across industry.

- Improving energy efficiency of existing buildings - PAS 2030

Supports the government's Green Deal by recommending best practice for installing, managing and providing energy efficiency measures.

- Building information modeling (BIM) - PAS 1192-2

Provides the platform for the application of BIM from design through facility management to demolition.

- Protecting organizations against cyber attacks - PAS 555

Defines a holistic approach to effective cyber security, which covers technical, physical, cultural and behavioural aspects, including governance and leadership.

The Delhaize Group

Issue

The Delhaize Group, an international food retailer, saw reputation, cost and risk benefits in compliance with the food safety standard BS EN ISO 22000. This required the development of an operational prerequisite programme (PRP).

Solution

Delhaize sponsored the development of a PAS to provide a common international methodology for the development of PRPs across the food retail sector.

PAS

- 1 Driven by market needs
- 2 Sponsored by industry leaders
- 3 Fast track to standardization
- 4 Co-branded with BSI
- 5 Helps achieve certification

“The PAS enabled us to deliver standardization of a solution on a national platform. We’ve achieved a huge amount through doing it.”
