BSI receives DAkkS accreditation for DIN EN 9100

Frankfurt am Main, 21 July 2021 - BSI, the business standards and improvement company, has received official accreditation status to deliver DIN EN 9100 certification from Deutsche Akkreditierungsstelle GmbH (DAkkS).

Before becoming accredited by DAkkS, BSI was already able to issue AS/EN 91XX-series certificates under accreditations from UKAS and ANAB. Now, BSI has expanded its portfolio by adding DAkkS accreditation for DIN EN 9100. To gain accredited status, BSI has been independently assessed by DAkkS to ensure it operates at the highest level of quality and service. This provides assurance to clients and to the whole supply chain, that the certificates issued by BSI are globally recognized, credible and impartial.

DIN EN 9100 represents the latest best-practice thinking in quality management for the aerospace, space and defense industry. It helps organizations continually improve, focus on meeting customer requirements, and ensure customer satisfaction. BSI's expert audit team and the BSI approach to service delivery will help our clients to be the best they can be, to optimize their systems, capability and customer service.

Tatiana Tarasova, Managing Director DACH at BSI Group Deutschland GmbH said:

"As a purpose-driven organization BSI puts our clients at the center of what we do. This accreditation means not only achieving additional capabilities in aerospace certification area, but also an opportunity to participate and contribute in the future development of aviation as an industry. Sustainable Mobility, Responsible Sourcing, Decarbonization are the themes BSI is deeply involved in and we look forward to closer cooperation with the industry to inspire trust for a more resilient world."
