Overview

In recent years, international suppliers have sometimes found themselves hitting the headlines – for all the wrong reasons. Having your company aligned to one of these suppliers, or having your reputation damaged due to unforeseen circumstances, is not a risk worth taking. That's why it's imperative to quantify supply chain risk for your team globally, so you can trade with confidence, mitigate risk and build lasting resilience. Our supply chain auditing service (also known as a second-party audit programme) enables you to gain complete visibility into your suppliers' practices worldwide. Our expert teams develop a supplier audit programme to suit your requirements and combine it with our risk data and analysis, so you get a holistic risk-based audit across your most sensitive supply chain operations.
